OUR COMMITMENT: TO KEEP THEIR FUTURE BRIGHT!

FROM THE FOUNDER'S DESK

As we get into the second half of 2026, I am excited by the progress being made in fulfilling the objectives of Tamiranashe Trust.

I visit the schools and see the smiling children. It gives me a sense of satisfaction that what I set out to do back in the years is on track.

I meet the parents, mostly women struggling to make ends meet, let alone fund their children's education in a tough economic environment, and I am spurred by their resolve.

All this, and the commitment of our supporting partners, can only point to a bright future for our children.

Forward ever, backward never!

OUR SELF-HELP PROJECTS

We continue to explore ways of lightening the economic burden of providing our children with decent education. Our strategy is two-pronged: appealing for donations towards infrastructure development and empowering the children's mothers through capacitation for self-help projects.

In some cases, the two strategies converge. For example, when we received a donation of sewing machines, they made school uniforms cheaper to procure, with the mothers themselves benefiting from training and actual production.

The projects are many. We are building the structure for a huge poultry production facility. When complete, it will cover us a lot on day-to-day running expenses like stationery and educational trips.

DANCING INTO THE FUTURE

At Tamiranashe, we continue to value the preservation of cultural identity amongst our children, recognising that such identity plays an important role in instilling confidence and discipline in them.

They are growing up in a society fast-eroding such identities and replacing them with vices like substance abuse and early childhood marriages.

Our duty is to protect them from such, and a constant reminder of who they are works wonders in nurturing them into who they want to be.

Pictured here is our school traditional dance group, immaculately clad in traditional attire and proud of their cultural identity.
