FROM THE FOUNDER'S DESK

Nothing excites me as much as reporting excellent progress towards our dream of building our own school.

Our Mt Carmel site is, in addition to already hosting classes, a hive of activity as we continue gathering the required building materials.

We are forever grateful to all those contributing, in whatever way, towards making this dream a reality.

Meanwhile, in this quarter, we broadened our training for economic self-reliance, with students going through a poultry-rearing crash course.

This was in partnership with a local poultry products merchant, Mashwede Chickens.

STUDENTS GET TRAINING IN POULTRY FARMING

In line with our thrust to economically empower vulnerable families through education, we continued with our projects training programs.

Our students went through a poultry rearing training session courtesy of a local corporate, Mashwede Chickens.

We believe the acquired knowledge will attack poverty on three fronts.

Firstly, our students are equipped to start their own projects and fund their own education. Secondly, by sharing the knowledge with their families, poverty at a family level is mitigated. Lastly, they are even ready to further their knowledge by applying what they learnt at the school's own running poultry project.

We are forever grateful to Mashwede Chickens for their capacitation.

This training adds yet another module to our training-for-empowerment programs, the most popular of which has been driver training offered to our students' parents, mostly women.

We have also trained others in detergent-making and baking.

PRIDE IN OUR CULTURE!

Our traditional dance performing group is now a spectacle to behold at many events, both inside and outside the school.

Made up of students in performing arts classes, an integral part of Zimbabwe's Heritage-based learning module (Education 5.0), they gave, as usual, a memorable performance at the graduation ceremony for poultry rearing trainees.

Performing arts is a proven livelihood stream, and at Tamiranash Trust, we will always give those inclined to it an opportunity to perfect their acts and eventually earn a living therefrom.
